THE MAN OF THE HOUR

Ex-Governor Black Nominates Theodore Roosevelt.

CHARACTERISTICS

THE TIMES DEMAND POWER, SKILL AND COURAGE.

Principles of the Party Defined and History Sketched-The Coming Standard Bearer.

CHICAGO, June 23.-Ex-Governor Frank S. Black of New York, who placed in nomination President Roosevelt before the republican convention today, addressed the delegates as follows: Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: We are nere to inaugurate a campaign which seems already to be nearly closed. So wisely have the people sowed and watched and tended, there seems little now to do but to measure up the grain. They are ranging themselves not for battle, but for harvest. In one column reaching from the Maine woods to the Puget sound are those people and those states which have stood so long together, that when great emergencies arise the nation turns instinctively to them. In this column, vast and solid, is a majority so overwhelming that the scattered squads in opposition can hardly raise another army.

The enemy has neither guns nor ammunition, and if they had they would use them on each other. Destitute of the weapons of effective warfare, the only evidence of approaching battle is in the tone and number of their bulletins. There is discord among the generals; discord among the sol-diers. Each would fight in his own way. but before assaulting his republican adversaries he would first destroy his own comrades in the adjoining tents. Each believes the weapons chosen by the other are not only wicked but fatal to the holder. That is true. This is the only war of modern times where the boomerang has been substituted for the gun.

Whatever fatalities may occur, however, among the discordant hosts now moving on St. Louis, no harm will come this fall to the American people. There will be no op-position sufficient to raise a conflict. There will be hardly enough for competition. There are no democratic plans for the conduct of the fall campaign. Their zeal is chiefly centered in discussion as to what Thomas Jefferson would do if he were liv-ing. He is not living, and but few of his descendants are among the democratic rem-nants of today. Whatever of patriotism or wisdom emanated from that distinguish-ed man is now represented in this conven-

Solving Issues by Guessing.

It is a sad day for any party when its only means of solving living issues is by guessing at the possible attitude of a statesman who is dead. This condition leaves that party always a beginner and makes every question new. The democratic party has seldom tried a problem on its own account, and when it has its blunders have been its only monuments, its course is remembered only in regret. As long as these things are recalled that party may serve as ballast, but it will never when all the people have forgotten will dawn a golden era for this new democracy. But the country is not ready yet to place a party in the lead whose most expressive motto is the cheerless word "forget." That motto may express contrition, but it does not inspire hope. Neither confidence nor enthusiasm will ever be aroused by any party which enters each campaign uttering the language of the mourner.

There is one fundamental plank, however, on which the two great parties are in full agreement. Both believe in the equality of men. The difference is that the democratic party would make every man as low as the poorest, while the republican party would make every man as high as the best. But the democratic course will provoke no outside interference now, for the republican motto is that of the great commander, "never interrupt the enemy while he is making a mistake."

Striking Example of Unity.

In politics as in other fields the most impressive arguments spring from contrasts. Never has there been a more striking example of unity than is now afforded by this assemblage. You are gathered here not as factions torn by discordant views, but moved by one desire and intent, you have come as the chosen representatives of the most enlightened party in the world. You meet not as strangers, for no men are strangers who hold the same beliefs and espouse the same cause. You may separate two bodies of water for a thousand years, but when once the barrier is removed they mingle instantly and are one. The same traditions inspire and the same purposes

Never in our lives did these purposes stand with deeper root than now. At least two generations have passed away since origin of that great movement from which sprang the spirit which has been the leading impulse in American politics for half a century. In that movement, which was both a creation and an example, were those great characters which endowed the republican party at its birth with the attributes of justice, equality and progress, which have held it to this hour in line with the highest sentiments of mankind. From these men we have inherited the desire, and to their memory we owe the resolution that those great schemes of government and humanity, inspired by their patriotism and established by their blood, shall remain as the fixed and permanent emblem of their labors, and the abiding signal of the liberty and progress of the

There are many new names in these days, but the republican party needs no new title. It stands now where it stood at the beginning. Memory alone is needed to tell the source from which the inspirations of the country flow. A drowsy memory would be as guilty now as a sleeping watchman pose great demands, but never in any en-terprise have the American people failed, and never in any crisis has the republican party failed to express the conscience and intelligence of that people. The public mind is awake both to its opportunities and its dangers. Nowhere in the world, in any era, did citizenship mean more than it means today in America. Men of courage and sturdy character are rang-ing themselves together with a unanimity seldom seen. There is no excuse for grop-ing in the dark, for the light is plain to him who will but raise his eyes.

The American people believe in a man or party that has convictions and knows why. party that has convictions and knows why. They believe that what experience has proved it is idle to resist. A wise man is any fool about to die. But there is a wisdom which with good fortune may guide the living and the strong. That wisdom springs from reason, observation and experience. Guided by these, this thing is plain, and young men may rely upon it that the history and purposes I have described, rising even to the essence and aspirations of patriotism, find their best concrete example in the career and doctrines of the republican party.

Singled Out the Man.

But not alone upon the principles of that party are its members in accord. With the same devotion which has marked their adherence to those principles, magnificent and enduring as they are, they have already singled out the man to bear their standard and to lead the way No higher badge was ever yet conferred. But great as the honor is, the circumtances which surround it honor even more profound. You have come from every state and territory in this fast domain. The country and the town have yied with each other in sending here their contributions to this splendid throng.

Every highway in the land is leading here and crowded with the members of that great party which sees in this splen-did city the symbol of its rise and power. Within this unexampled multitude is every rank and condition of free men, every creed and occupation. But today a common purpose and desire have engaged us all, and from every nook and corner of the country rises but a single choice to fill the most exalted office in the world. He is no stranger waiting in the shade to be called suddenly into public light.

The American people have seen him for many years, and always where the fight was thickest and the greatest need was felt. He has been alike conspicuous in the pursuits of peace and in the arduous stress of war. No man now living will forget the spring of '98, when the American mind was so inflamed and American patriotism so aroused; when among all the eager citizens surging to the front as soldiers the man whom this convention has already in its heart was among the first to hear the call and answer to his Preferring peace, but not afraid of war faithful to every private obligation, yet first to volunteer at the sign of national peril: a leader in civil life and yet so quick to comprehend the arts of war that he grew almost in a day to meet the high exactions of command.

That Which Tests a Man.

There is nothing which so tests a man as great and unexpected danger. He may pass his life amid ordinary scenes, and what he is or does but few will ever know. But when the crash comes or the flames break out a moment's time will single out the hero in the crowd.

A flash of lightning in the night will reveal what years of daylight have not discovered to the eye. And so the flash of the Spanish war revealed that lofty courage and devotion which the American heart so loves and which you have met again to decorate and recognize. His qualities do not need to be retold, for no man in that exalted place since Lincoln has been better known in every household in the land. He is not conservative, conservatism means waiting till it is too late. He is not wise, if wisdom is to count a thing a hundred times when once country, as that which follows an oppor tunity unembraced. Fortune soars with high and rapid wing, and whoever brings it down must shoot with accuracy and speed. Only the man with steady eye and nerve and the courage to pull the trigger brings the largest opportunities to the ground. He does not always listen while all the sages speak, but every day at night-fall beholds some record which if not complete has been at least pursued with conscience and intrepid resolution. He is no slender flower swaying in the wind, but that heroic fiber which is best nurtured by the mountains and the snow. He spends little time in review, for that he knows can be done by the schools.

Grapples With Living Problems.

A statesman grappling with the living problems of the hour, he gropes but little in the past. He believes in going ahead. He believes that in shaping the destintes of this great republic, hope is a higher impulse than regret. He believes that preparation for future triumphs is a more important duty than an inventory of past mistakes. A profound student of history, he is today the greatest history maker in the world. With the instincts of the scholar, he is yet forced from the scholar's pursuits by thos superb qualities which fit him to the last degree for those great world currents now rushing past with larger volume and more portentous aspect than for many years be-

The fate of nations is still decided by their wars. You may talk of orderly tri-bunals and learned referees; you may sing in your schools the gentle praises of the quiet life; you may strike from your books the last note of every martial anthem, and yet out in the smoke and thunder will al-ways be the tramp of horses and the silent, be kept in front. If the pressure is great the material to resist it must be granite and iron. Whether we wish it or not, America. is abroad in this world. Her interests are in every street, her name is on every tongue. Those interests, so sacred and stupendous, should be trusted only to the care of those whose power, skill and courage have been tested and approved.

And in the man whom you will choose the highest sense of every nation in the world beholds a man who typifies as no other living American does the spirit and the purposes of the twentieth century. He does not claim to be the Solomon of his time. There are many things he may not know, but this is sure, that above all things else he stands for progress, courage and fair play, which are the synonyms of the American name.
There are times when great fitness is hardly less than destiny, when the ele-ments so come together that they select the agent they will use. Events some-times select the strongest man, as light-ning goes down the highest rod. And so it is with those events which for many months with unerring sight have led you to a single name which I am chosen only Gentlemen, I nominate for President of the United States the highest living type of the youth, the vigor and the promise of a great country and a great age, Theo-dore Roosevelt of New York.

NOMINATION SECONDED.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana Addresses the Convention.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana said in seconding the nomination of Theodore Roose-

One difference between the opposition and ourselves is this: They select their candidate for the people, and the people select our candidate for us. This was true four years ago when we accepted the people's judgment and named William McKinley, whose perfect mingling of mind and heart of wisdom and of tenderness won the trust and love of the nation then and makes almost holy his memory now. His power was in the people's favor, his shrine is in the people's hearts. It is true today when we again accept the people's judgment and name Theodore Roosevelt, whose sympathies are as wide as the republic, whose courage, honesty and vision meet all emergencies, and the sum of whose qualities make him the type of twentieth century Americanism. And the twentieth century American is nothing more than the man of '76 facing a new Theodore Roosevelt, like William Mc-Kinley, is the nominee of the American fireside. So were Washington and Jefferson in the early time; so was Andrew Jack-son when he said: "The Union: It must be preserved;" so was Abraham Lincoln when, the republic saveo, he bade us "bind up the nation's wounds;" and Grant when, from victory's very summit his lofty words, "Let us have peace," voiced the spirit of the hour and the people's prayer. When nom-inated by parties, each of these great Presidents was, at the periods named, already chosen by the public judgment. And so oday, the republican party, whose strength is in its obedience to the will of the American people, merely executes again the de-cree which comes to it from the American in naming Theodore Roosevelt as our

His Chart of Statesmanship.

The people's thought is his thought; American ideals, his ideals. This is his only chart of statesmanship and no other is safe. For the truest guide an American President can have is the collective intelligence and massed morality of the American people. And this ancient rule of the fathers is the rule of our leaders now.

Theo lore Roosevelt is a leader who leads; Theolore Roosevelt is a leader who leads; because he carries out the settled purposes of the people. Our President's plans, when achieved, are always found to be merely the nation's will accomplished. And that is why the people will elect him.

They will elect him because they know that if he is President we will get to work and keep at work on the canal. After decades of delay when the people want a thing done, they want it done.

They know that while he is President the flag will "stay put," and no American ad-mony with the principle of protection While he is President peace with every nation will be preserved at any cost, excepting only the sacrifice of American rights; and the vigor with which he maintains these will be itself a guarantee of peace.

Serves the People Well.

The American people will elect him because, in a word, they know that he does things the people want done; does things, not merely discusses them-does things only after discussing them-but does things; and does only those things the people would have him do. This is characteristically American; for wherever he is, the American is he who achieves.

On every question all men know where he stands. Americans, frank themselves, demand frankness in their servants. Uncertainty is the death of business. The people can always get along if they know where they are and whither they are going.

His past is his proof. Every great measure of his administration was so wise that, enthusiastically sustained by his own party, it won votes even from the opposition. Do you name Cuban reciprocity? The opposition resisted and then opposition votes helped to ratify it.

Do you name corporate legislation? The opposition resisted and then opposition otes helped to enactift. Do you name the canal — that largest work of centuries, the eternal wedding of occans, shrinking the circumference of the globe, making distant people neighbors, advancing forever civilization all around the world? This historic undertaking in the interest of all the face, planned by American statesmanship, to be wrought by American hands, to stand through the ages protected by the American flag; this vast achievement which will endure when our day shall have become ancient, and which alone is enough to make the name of Theodore Roosevelt illustrious through all time—this fulfillment of the dream accomplished by republican effort. finally received votes even from an opposi-tion that had tried to thwart it. Of what measure of Theodore Roosevelt's administration does the opposition dare even to propose the repeal? And when has the record of any President won greater approval?

Trust Him as a Statesman.

And so the people trust him as a statesman. Better than that, they love him as a man. He wins admiration in vain who wins that temple of happiness and virtue where iwell the wives and mothers of the republic, cherishing the beautiful in life and lic, cherishing the beautiful in life and guarding the morality of the nation—in the American home the name of Theodore Roosevelt is not only honored but beloved. And that is a greater triumph than the victory of battlefields, greater credit than successful statesmanship, greater honor than the presidency itself would be without it. Life holds no reward so noble as the confidence and love of the American people. The American people! The mightiest force The American people! The mightiest force for good the ages have evolved. They began as children of liberty. They believed in God and His providence. They took truth and justice and tolerance as their eternal ideals and marched fearlessly forward. Wildernesses stretched before them crossed them. Deserts obstructed—they passed them. Their faith failed them not and a continent was theirs. From ocean to ocean cities rose, fields blossomed, rall-roads ran; but everywhere church and school were permanent proof that the priniples of their origin were the life of their American methods changed, but American character remained the same. They out-lived the stage coach, but not the Bible. They advanced but forgot not their fathers.

They delved in earth, but remembered the higher things. They made highways of the oceans, but distance and climate altered not their Americanism. They began as children of liberty, and children of liberty they remain. They began as servants of the Father of Lights, and His servants they remain. And so into their hands is daily given more of power and opportunity that they may work even larger righteousness in the world and scatter over ever widening fields the blessed seeds of human happiness.

Wonderful Progress.

Wonderful beyond prophecy's forecast their progress; noble beyond the vision of lesire their future. In 1801 Jefferson said: "The United States (then) had room enough for our descendants to the thousandth and thousandth generation;" three generations behold the oceans our boundaries. Washington never dreamed of railways. Today electricity and steam make Maine and California household neighbors. This advance, which no seer could have foretold, we made because we are Americans—because made because we are Americans—because a free people with unfettered minds and unquestioning belief joyfully faced the universe of human possibilities.

These possibilities are not exhausted; we have hardly passed their boundaries. The American people are not exhausted; we have only tested our strength. God's work for us in the world is not finished; His future missions for the American people future missions for the American people will be grander than any He has given us, will be grander than any He has given us, nobler than we now can comprehend. And these tasks as they come we will accept and accomplish as our fathers accomplished theirs. And when our generation shall have passed and our children shall catch from our aging hands the standard we have borne, it will still be the old flag of Yorktown and Appomattox and Manila bay; the music to which they in their turn will then move onward will still be the strains that cheered the dying Warren on Bunker that cheered the dying Warren on Bunker Hill and inspired the men who answered Lincoln's call; and the ideals that will be in them triumphant as they are in us will still be the old ideals that have made the

CANNOT GET PENSION.

Decision of Court Against Mrs Amelia H. Orndorff. In the case of Amelia H. Orndorff against the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, in which Mrs. Orndorff, the widow of a policeman, sought to require the Commissioners, by a writ of mandamus, to grant her a pension, payable out of the 'policemen's fund," Chief Justice Clabaugh, before whom the case was argued several weeks ago, today delivered an opinion sustaining the action of the Commiss denying Mrs. Orndorff's application.

Mrs. Orndorff's husband, Charles H. Orndorff, was appointed a private on the metropolitan police force of the District of Columbia September 1, 1888, under the name of Charles Marion. The 9th of October, 1898, he was taken sick with typhold fever and died October 30, 1888, having been a member of the police force but little more than one month, including the period of his sickness. Mrs. Orndorff's contention was that her husband contracted the typhoid fever in the line of his duties as a nollegary.

The District Commissioners in their answer to Mrs. Orndorft's petition stated that the petitioner has frequently demanded from them an allowance out of the "policemen's fund," claiming that she is the widow of "Charles Marion," but they asserted that she made such demand for the first time on the 31st of December, 1902, at which time the Commissioners declare they first learned that Mrs. Orndorff claimed to be the widow of Marion, and that Marion's real name was Charles H. Orndorff. The Commissioners dealed that the typhold fever was contracted in the line of duty.

The case came up upon appeal yesterday before the circuit court, Judge Merrick presiding. The court held the statute in questions. disease contracted in the line of duty as such policeman." They concluded their answer with the statement that, in their opinion, Mrs. Orndorff was not entitled to any allowance whatever out of the police Chief Justice Clabaugh stated in delivering his opinion that the action mentioned was within the competency of the Com-missioners, and that their decision in the matter was final and could not be reviewed by the courts. Attorneys Ralston & Siddons and Eugene

A. Jones appeared for Mrs. Orndorff, while the Commissioners were represented by Attorney A. Leftwich Sinclair.
